

Janine expertly juggles paper clips and glue sticks to stretch any budget.

Janine presents a crumbling ceiling with enthusiasm, assuring everyone it's fine.

Gregory, baffled by the broken copier, wonders why it won't work.

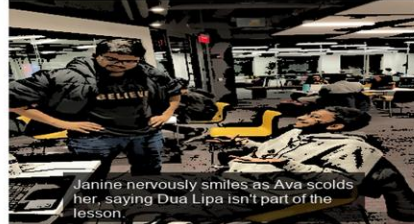

Gregory presses buttons, only to make the copier explode and worsen things.

Janine takes a break in the lounge, sneaking in five more minutes of Dua Lipa.

Ava catches Janine watching TV and drags her back to work.

Janine nervously smiles as Ava scolds her, saying Dua Lipa isn't part of the lesson.

Ava films a TikTok in her office, living her PrincipalGoals dream.

Ava dramatically poses during a fire drill, turning the emergency into a photo op.

Melissa barters lasagna with a delivery guy to secure classroom chalk.

Janine gives the broken printer a pep talk, hoping it'll work.

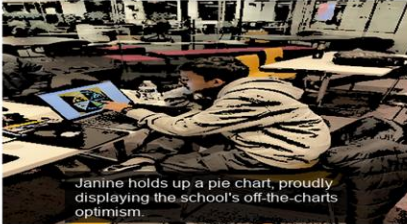

Gregory notices smoke coming from the copier and wonders if it's on fire.

Ava completely ignores the fire alarm as she stays focused on her work.

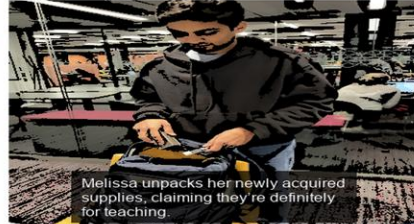

Melissa walks calmly through the school chaos, treating it as a normal day.

Janine holds up a pie chart, proudly displaying the school's off-the-charts optimism.

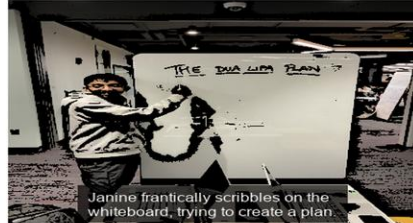

Gregory awkwardly smiles at the camera, unsure if he did things right.

Melissa unpacks her newly acquired supplies, claiming they're definitely for teaching.

Ava checks her TikTok stats and is thrilled to see her followers growing.

Janine frantically scribbles on the whiteboard, trying to create a plan.

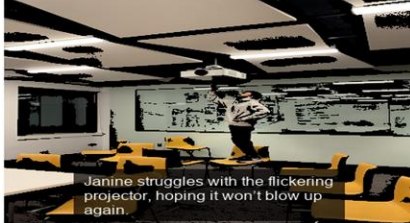

Janine nervously laughs as chaos ensues, pretending everything is under control.

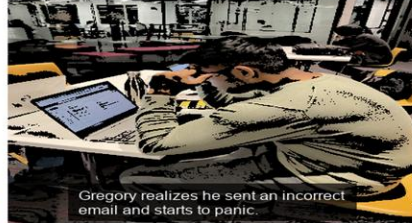

Janine nervously reviews her notes, barely holding her clipboard together.

Janine struggles with the flickering projector, hoping it won't blow up again.

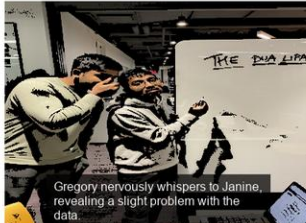

Gregory realizes he sent an incorrect email and starts to panic.

Gregory watches his computer in horror, unable to believe what just happened.

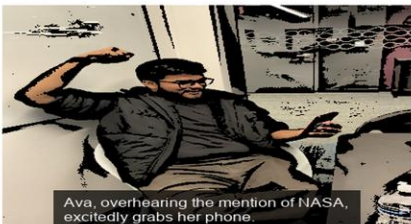

Ava struts into the room confidently, ready for her leadership photos.

Gregory nervously whispers to Janine, revealing a slight problem with the data.

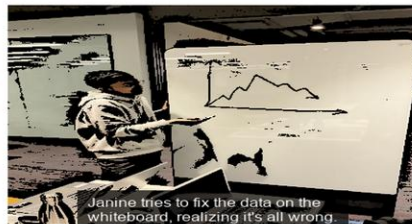

Janine freezes as Gregory explains the issue, wondering why NASA is involved.

Ava, overhearing the mention of NASA, excitedly grabs her phone.

Gregory puts his face in his hands as Ava starts filming the "NASA news."

Janine tries to fix the data on the whiteboard, realizing it's all wrong.

Ava sets up her phone for a TikTok, hyping up the school's new space connection.

Janine turns to Gregory in disbelief, asking if he really sent the wrong email.

Gregory, looking pale, admits that he didn't mean to send the data.

Melissa quietly stacks up supplies in the background, staying out of the chaos.

Ava jumps in front of the camera mid-presentation, declaring the school a space school.

Janine scribbles furiously on the whiteboard, trying to salvage the presentation.

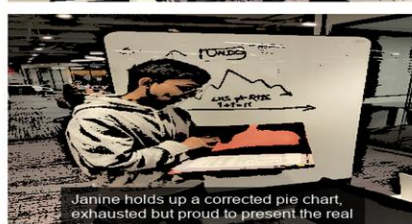

Gregory whispers to Janine, asking if there's an undo button for the data mistake.

Melissa watches the chaos unfold with a grin, offering help if needed.

Ava films herself with a fake rocket helmet, excited about Abbott Elementary's space mission.

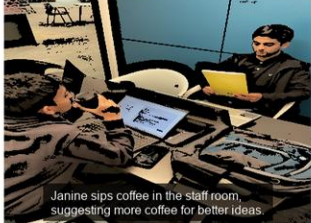

Janine holds up a corrected pie chart, exhausted but proud to present the real data.

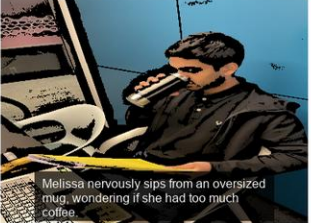

Melissa stares at the low test scores, frustrated by the lowest results ever.

Janine sips coffee in the staff room, suggesting more coffee for better ideas.

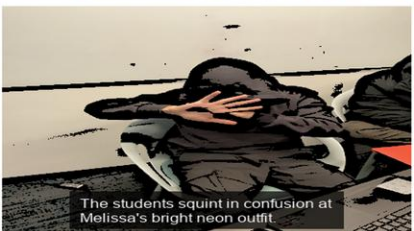

Melissa nervously sips from an oversized mug, wondering if she had too much coffee.

Janine sketches furiously on the 'Mood Index' chart, promoting neon for better focus.

Melissa enters the classroom in a bright neon red shirt, looking like a highlighter.

The students squint in confusion at Melissa's bright neon outfit.

Melissa nervously points to the chalkboard, proposing something new to the class.

Janine watches from the door, giving Melissa a thumbs up, encouraging her efforts.

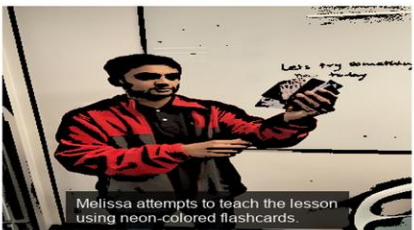

Melissa stumbles over her neon shoes, tripping on classroom supplies.

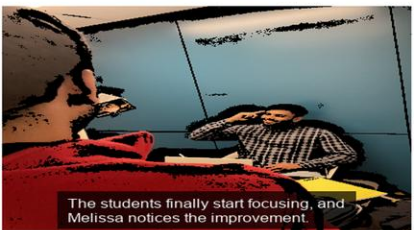

The students laugh as Melissa tries to regain her balance, insisting she's fine.

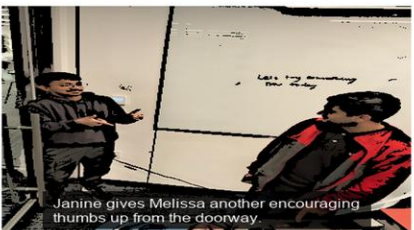

Melissa looks embarrassed, while Janine proudly holds up the 'Mood Index' chart.

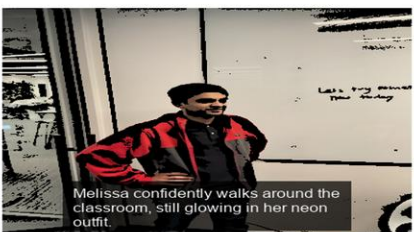

Melissa attempts to teach the lesson using neon-colored flashcards.

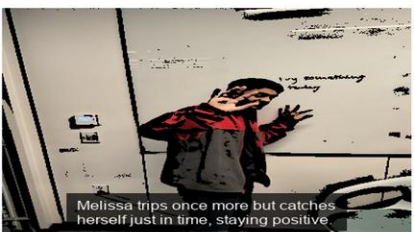

The students finally start focusing, and Melissa notices the improvement.

Janine gives Melissa another encouraging thumbs up from the doorway.

Melissa confidently walks around the classroom, still glowing in her neon outfit.

Melissa trips once more but catches herself just in time, staying positive.

The students listen attentively as Melissa finds her groove with neon teaching.

Janine high-fives Melissa in the hallway after class, praising her neon genius.

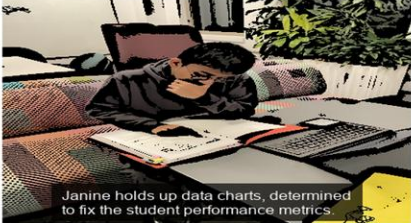

Melissa, now back in normal clothes, smiles at the camera, feeling accomplished.

Ava winks, holding up the 'Mood Index' chart, emphasizing the success of neon science.

Janine holds up data charts, determined to fix the student performance metrics.

Gregory quietly unloads her stash of supplies, confident they have everything they need.

Ava gasps at her phone, realizing that fewer students mean less fame.

Gregory nervously cuts pizza slices, wondering if they really need data for this.

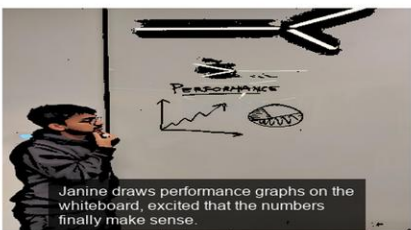

Janine holds up a chart titled 'Pizza Performance', joking about bigger slices for better scores.

Melissa grabs a huge slice of pizza, grinning about how well-deserved it is.

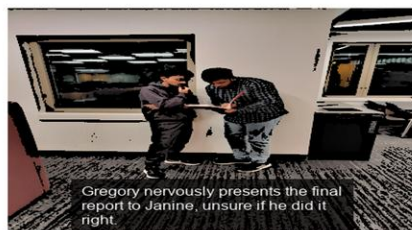

Ava films the pizza party, excitedly livestreaming the 'PizzaSuccess.'

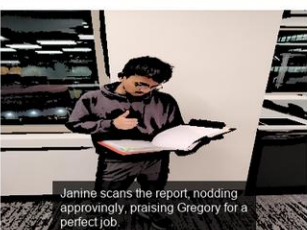

Janine draws performance graphs on the whiteboard, excited that the numbers finally make sense.

Melissa stands in the doorway, smirking, reminding Janine that data works wonders.

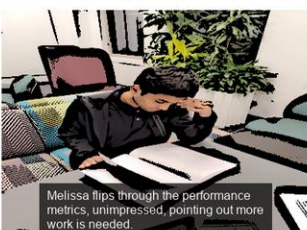

Gregory nervously presents the final report to Janine, unsure if he did it right.

Janine scans the report, nodding approvingly, praising Gregory for a perfect job.

Ava dramatically holds up an enrollment chart, excited about more students and followers.

Melissa flips through the performance metrics, unimpressed, pointing out more work is needed.

Gregory nervously adjusts his shirt while Janine pats him on the back for surviving the report.

Ava sneaks selfies during the meeting, capturing her version of 'success.'

Janine holds up the final graph triumphantly, declaring that they've saved Abbott.

Melissa raises an eyebrow at Janine, half-smiling, knowing there's still more to fix.

Gregory smiles nervously at the enrollment chart, relieved that it's finally going up.

Ava checks her phone, grinning as her followers return, declaring the crisis over.

All four celebrate like data-driven superheroes, saving the day with teamwork!